MAJOR LEGISLATIVE ISSUES

Lawmakers continue debating critical policies. So far, the Legislature has sent one House bill and four Senate bills to Gov. Laura Kelly, with one vetoed.

Several high-profile issues remain unresolved:

State Budget

Legislators are working to finalize the fiscal year 2026 budget. The Senate will debate House Bill 2007 on Tuesday, following its advancement by the Ways and Means Committee. House Speaker Dan Hawkins (R-Wichita) emphasized the urgency of completing budget negotiations quickly so the conference committee can begin work as soon as the Senate acts.

Tax Relief

Several proposals addressing property tax and income tax relief remain under active consideration in both the House and Senate.

Judicial Elections

The House Judiciary Committee is expected to advance Senate Concurrent Resolution 1611, which would allow voters to decide whether to elect Kansas Supreme Court justices instead of relying on nomination committee and gubernatorial appointments.

The Senate passed SCR 1611 with a 27-13 vote, securing the necessary two-thirds majority.

The House must reach 84 votes to place the measure on the Aug. 4, 2026, primary ballot when it takes up the constitutional amendment next week.

Some legislators had previously preferred a federal-style appointment process, but the necessary support did not exist. Therefore, certain lawmakers have now shifted their focus to securing the votes for direct elections.

Election Laws & Vacancy Appointments

Legislators continue debating election reforms and a proposal to change how statewide elected officials and congressional vacancies are filled.

Wildlife Secretary Confirmation

The Senate will consider Gov. Kelly's nomination of Chris Kennedy as secretary of the Department of Wildlife and Parks. Kennedy has served as interim secretary for a year but faces confirmation hurdles, including past concerns over his support of diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI) policies.

Other Potential Legislative Items

Lawmakers continue to consider several high-priority bills aimed at restricting the influence of "countries of concern" in key areas. Proposals under review seek to curtail or prohibit foreign influence in drone technology, land ownership, and campaign contributions. These measures reflect growing concerns over national security and economic control.

Additionally, legislators and the governor are working toward comprehensive childcare reform at the state level. Lawmakers share a broad consensus on the need to improve oversight and coordination to enhance childcare accessibility and quality. Many remain optimistic that this effort will result in significant policy changes.

With two weeks remaining, legislators acknowledge the challenges of working within a condensed 90-day session. House Majority Leader Chris Croft (R-Overland Park), expressed confidence that the Legislature will complete key policy work before adjournment.
