

CONSTRUCTION

OVERVIEW

For more than 30 years, Foulston Siefkin's Construction Practice Group has provided representation to clients working on some of the most significant projects in Kansas and beyond. These include skyline-defining buildings and community landmarks such as university education and sports facilities, hospitals, power and water treatment plants, government facilities, hotels, factories, highways, shopping centers, corporate headquarters, and office complexes.

The firm's Construction Practice Group offers a full range of advisory, transactional, and litigation services to contractors, subcontractors, architects, design professionals, builders, suppliers, public institutions, company owners, and project managers. The practice, one of the largest and most comprehensive in Kansas, has earned a national reputation for excellence and a place among the first-tier firms for construction law as ranked by U.S. News and World Report and Best Lawyers. In addition, Chambers USA, Benchmark Litigation, and Super Lawyers regularly honor the practice's attorneys.

Foulston Siefkin's talented construction attorneys deliver sound, practical counsel that is designed to address the business goals of each client in a cost-effective, efficient manner. The practice's many capabilities encompass:

- Design and Construction Contract Drafting and Negotiation
- Professional Errors & Omissions Defense
- Construction Change Negotiations
- Construction Defect Litigation
- Government Contract Claims
- Construction Insurance Advice and Dispute Resolution

FOULSTON

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

- Professional Licensing and Disciplinary Proceedings

Clients regularly seek the firm's advice on ways to mitigate the threat of litigation, address cost overruns, and implement best-practice processes into their day-to-day operations. While Foulston Siefkin construction lawyers are skilled in resolving disputes out of court, there are instances when litigation is unavoidable. Whether appearing before a state board, an arbitration panel, in trial or appellate court, or before the U.S. Court of Federal Claims or the U.S. Boards of Contract Appeals, the practice's lawyers are known for presenting persuasive arguments that advance clients' positions.

AREAS OF REPRESENTATION

Contract Drafting and Negotiation

We counsel with contractors (both prime and sub), design professionals, and owners in the development of project-appropriate contracts for projects of all scales.

Professional Errors & Omissions Matters

We regularly defend architects and engineers from both insured and uninsured malpractice claims involving personal injury, property damage, and economic loss.

Construction Change Negotiations

We counsel with contractors and owners in evaluating the cost and schedule impact of differing site conditions, cardinal changes, project delays, and owner-directed changes.

Construction Defect Litigation

At Foulston Siefkin trial work – whether in litigation or arbitration – is a hallmark of our practice. Our construction group not only prepares but also frequently tries construction defect cases. Recent experiences include disputes over failed roofing and other building enclosure systems, direct buried system insulation; heating, ventilating, and air conditioning systems; wastewater treatment equipment; electrical generating equipment; and digital controls.

Government Contracts

We represent contractors and subcontractors in government contract claims before Kansas Department of Transportation, the U.S. Court of Federal Claims, and the U.S. Boards of Contract Appeals.

Construction Insurance Matters

Our insurance expertise includes the interpretation of and, where necessary, litigation over, commercial general liability (CGL) coverages and exclusions for contractors.

Professional Licensing and Discipline

We represent Kansas architects, engineers, and surveyors in investigations conducted by and disciplinary proceedings before the Kansas State Board of Technical Professions.
